The president’s tweet came as Senate Republicans and Democrats prepare to haggle over the fate of ObamaCare and other issues. Trump had posted the tweet on Thursday as the House Judiciary Committee was hearing from Attorney General William Barr about the status of special counsel Robert Mueller’s Russia probe, as the committee voted along party lines to hold Barr in contempt of Congress. “Thank you to all of the hard working people who are in our country at this moment. The American Economy is very strong!” Trump said in a second tweet. “We are better than ever before in our Country’s history, for all of its people, of all races, religions, and genders. We love and praise our Country and are all proud of it!” Trump’s tweet came as House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jerrold Nadler, D-N.Y., was expected to announce the committee's plans to issue an article of impeachment against Trump. The president’s tweets on Friday capped a busy week in Washington, as the Senate is expected to vote on a controversial resolution condemning the president’s attacks on four progressive freshman congresswomen of color who are critics of the president. The president called the congresswomen "racist" and “proposals... to empower and encourage these supposedly 'left wing' Democrats, all the radical socialist stuff.”
